

REMAINING ADVENTURES
Mr. Bear's New Job
By DADDY

Jack and Janet are told by the birds that Cold Nose, the bear, has lost his freedom, is chained in prison, and is under the spell of a clever magician. They are taken by Perky Squirrel to try to free the bear.

CHAPTER II
The Queer Magician

JACK and Janet stared in wonder at the strange sight before them. In a cage in the clearing was Cold Nose, the bear, standing upright. Beside him was the clever magician, a small bird with a human face, wearing a wizard's robe and holding a magic wand. The bear looked at the magician with a look of awe and fear.

The magician waved his wand and called out an order which Jack and Janet did not understand. At once Cold Nose, the bear, turned right side up, reared on his hind legs and stood like a soldier awaiting an officer's commands.

"Look at him! Look at him!" cried [illegible] shrill empy shrill empy Ocky Robin. "See how the clever magician has made him a slave!" The magician called out another order. Cold Nose, the bear, dropped on all fours and waddled close to the magician. The magician climbed on the bear's back. He waved his wand, and Cold Nose waddled obediently about the camp, the magician riding grandly, like a king on an elephant.

This truly was astonishing. Only a short time before the bear, hungry from his long winter sleep, had chased Jack and Janet to eat them for breakfast. Here he was acting as tame as a gentle Shetland pony.

The bear now turned toward them and for the first time they saw the face of the magician. This gave them another surprise. The face was white as chalk. Out of it stared two bright eyes, circled by heavy black rings. The tip of the nose was a fiery red. The mouth was white and grinning.

"Why he looks like a clown in a circus," whispered Janet to Jack. And so he did. "Magicians take strange shapes," chattered Perky Squirrel. "I wouldn't like to be the slave of one." Jack and Janet agreed with him. "You got him into this fix," squeaked Perky Squirrel. "Now you get him out of it." Jack and Janet did not think that they could do it. The magician had caused them to adoken the bear from his winter's sleep, and the bear's hunger had been to blame for what had followed. It has caused him to want to eat the children and this had led to his capture by the freckle-faced boy.

But Jack and Janet were ready to do what they could to free Cold Nose from slavery to the magician. They thought it must be awful for a creature of the wild woods to be shut up in a cage under a magic spell. The magician halted Cold Nose with a touch of the wand, and slid off the bear's back. Cold Nose reared on his hind legs and, with one paw on his breast and the other behind his back, made a polite dancing-school bow to the magician.

The magician bowed in return, opened the door of the cage, stepped out and went into the house. "Now is your chance to set Cold Nose free," urged Perky Squirrel excitedly. "Set Cold Nose free! Set Cold Nose free!" sang the birds. Jack glanced at the house. The magician seemed safely inside. Jack threw open the door of the cage. "Come out, Cold Nose," he whispered. "Hurry! You are free," added Janet. But Cold Nose just stood there and frowned at the children. He didn't seem a bit anxious to be free.

"He is under a spell! He can't move! Bring him out," sang the birds. Jack and Janet each seized Cold Nose by a paw. They tried to drag the bear from the cage, but Cold Nose wouldn't budge. "Come! Come!" urged Jack. "We are setting you free!" pleaded Janet. Cold Nose suddenly grabbed Jack in his paws, squeezing him tight. "Don't you dare let me free!" he growled. "If you take me from my master, I'll bit your head off."

Which was a very astounding thing for a slave to say. In tomorrow's chapter Jack and Janet learn why Cold Nose doesn't want to be set free, and it is a reason that surprises them and the birds.

No. 151—To Blow 100 Smoke Rings a Minute
To blow a hundred smoke rings a minute sounds like an impossible feat, but it may be easily accomplished by constructing a "smoke ring machine," an impromptu contrivance that can be made in two minutes.

To six calling cards and bend in the ends as shown in Figure 1. In the center of one card cut a small, round hole. Assemble the cards to form a loose, six-sided box, with the hole on top. Blow several puffs of cigar or cigarette smoke into the box. By merely tapping the side of the box with a pencil (Figure 2) perfect smoke rings will be propelled through the hole in the top. If the taps are made in quick succession, the rings will rise at the rate of more than 100 a minute.

Adventures With a Powder
It's all very well to like white gloves and to wear them a lot. But it also is an expensive habit, for it seems as if one were kept busy trotting back and forth to the cleaners. The solution, of course, is to clean your gloves yourself. In which case you would want the wooden glove frames. They are shaped, I need hardly say, exactly like a pair of gloves, and you carefully fit your white kids over them, tight and secure. Then with an excellent glove paste that also can be bought, you clean your gloves in short order, and of course at a great saving. These frames are fifty cents and, from all reports, are most satisfactory.

When you first buy one of those fat gold-finished boxes of powder to carry in your pocketbook, you pay at least $1 or $1.50. And, of course, long before the box shows any signs of wear, the powder is all gone, which means another investment of the same price. Understand, I am speaking of the rather large ones now—those that measure about three inches across. Well,
